SYLVESTER BURLEIGH 1829-1912.

Born Nov. 5, 1829 at Slacks Corners in a log shanty on Lot 10, Conc. 7 in the Township of Portland, opposite Dexter Sigsworth's house (1923).

The old house was a story and a half high, the lower story of logs and the upper of frame. One went upstairs from the outside.

He collected, in the fall of 1880, money for a bell for Verona Methodist Church, and gave a social, cooked the food alone, and those who came paid only twenty-five cents a couple. The bell cost two-fifty-five dollars.

The cost of coming to market to Kingston was fifty-two cents, ten cents to get on the market, and forty-two cents from Slacks Corner to Kingston. This paid both ways.

For a period of a year or two it was undecided who would get the Homestead, i.e., John Randolph or Sylvester. When it was decided that Sylvester would stay, a contract for removing the manure was given to Caleb Hicks. Caleb and his nephew were going to do it but Grandma Burleigh said she would rather feed a bee than Caleb as he was so slow. So a bee was held and forty teams and a hundred men were present.

He was County Constable when he was a young man and after fifty years service he was appointed County Constable for life, an honorary position.

In Mar. 10, 1852 he married MARTHA MILLINGTON TAYLOR, born Mar. 14, 1833, died Feb. 23, 1923. The ceremony was performed at Cataraqui, Ont., by Charles Taggart, a minister of the Wesleyan Methodist Church and witnessed by JOSIAH TAYLOR and IRA BURLEY.

Their children are--

WELTHA KEZIA BURLEIGH, born Apr. 15, 1853.

JOHN WESLEY BURLEIGH, " Jan. 22, 1857.

While fulfilling the duties of county constable he was required to proceed to Hinchinbrook Township and arrest one Peter Nadeau. He found Nadeau and arrested him but the prisoner refused to walk. Burleigh then sent an assistant into the woods to cut a poplar pole. When the pole was produced Nadeau asked what it was for. He was told that Her Majesty's officers of the Peace had commandeered a conveyance and he must therefore prepare himself for the journey. He was still adamant, so Burleigh had him tied to the pole. This brought forth much abuse from the prisoner, but to no avail. Then, finding that the riding was rather rough he was willing to walk. One might add that the prisoner was safely confined to the jail none the for wear.

About the year 1836 the family removed to French Creek (Clayton) and John R. Burley Diary.

April the 13th in 1868

We left Kingston Monday evening at sundown. In the night the water got quite rough. Towards morning Betsey and the children got sea sick. About noon they began to get better. We ran towards the American shore to get out of rough water. The shore was low level country. We passed the town of <sup>(Hamilton?)</sup> Wilson situated on low lands. We saw a few miles beyond the town Brock's Monument about as high as a pine tree. Then next Niagara village at the mouth of the river twelve miles from the Canal. We got to the Canal Tuesday evening at eight o'clock. This place is called Port Dalhousie. We had to stay there until eight o'clock Wednesday morning then we started up the Welland Canal. We soon came to a village called St. Catharines a nice compact town all brick buildings. Here the weather was as hot as summer. The people were ploughing and it looked on the fields like midsummer. The land is clay and a little rolling some places quite large hills. Not a stone could be seen only those that were put in the sides of the Canal. The roads were as dry as summer roads. It looked like a town as far as one could see up and down the Canal. Betsey and the children are quite well & are quite delighted by the new scenery. There were vessels lying in places all along the canal. ~~There~~ cars were running on both sides of the Canal. The Canal is 28 miles in length and has 28 locks. Such getting up stairs I never did see. The next town was called Thorold in the Township of Thorold is quite a large incorporated town. We got there Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. In the night the wind rose. We could not go any further until Thursday evening. About sundown we went two miles then the engine got out of order and we had to stop until Friday morning. They took the engine apart took a part of it back to the town got it repaired & came back with it about noon. The wind rose, blew a gale until night, then they got up steam, went two miles in the dark, came up to some vessels that were laid to. We could not get by them and had to stop till Saturday morning. Then we started at sunrise, went 12 miles past a small town called Welland. We got at the mouth of the Canal at 7 o'clock. Here is a town called Port Colborne. We stopped a few minutes then we started on Lake Erie with a head wind. The wind blew hard and cold and fine snow flying. The waves rolled from 10 feet. The vessel plunged and jumped struck in the trough as though it had struck the ground. The children got seasick in half an hour after we got on the lake. After we had gone about twenty miles west the sea got so rough and the wind blew so hard that we could not go ahead because the boat swinging on the pier broke one of her paddles off. They turned and ran with the wind to a place called Port Maitland. We got there about three o'clock. This place is at the mouth of the Grand River. This place is a barren sand. When we were there the sand drifted to the shore. We started from this Port on Sunday morning at sunrise for Long Point with a side wind. The wind blew from the East. They hoisted the mainsail for to help the engine. The morning was clear and cold. A good sailing breeze in the afternoon the wind went down. The lake got calm as we passed Long Point.

we saw six or seven vessels that were lost last Fall. One was driven for some rods up on the land, some the mast was half out of water, some the mast was just out of water some were gone to rack all along. The north shore of Lake Erie is level and a bare yellow sand that will drift with the wind. This sand continued about half way from Long Point to Stanley. Along this sandy shore there were no buildings to be seen -- all woods. Then we passed ~~by~~ a high shore with clay bank about forty feet high with clearings and buildings with a great deal of woods. We got to Port Stanley Sunday evening about sundown. We stayed there all night at a Tavern. It cost three dollars. Betsy and the children started on the cars at nine in the morning for London. I came on with my team and wagon.

Sanford Burley lived on south bank of Hardwood Creek half mile east of the bridge at Lower Verona (lot 8 or 9 in Cone & Portland). He was killed by a cedar tree directly south of the house (whose foundation remains to be seen yet). Dad was about 8 or 10 when this happened. Grandma was outside at their house and heard groans in the old workshop & came to the house crying. Shortly after a man came on horseback to tell of it. (The old shop was torn down before Dad was a young man). Sanford was a son of Cornelius Burley. He was at this time old enough to have sons 12 to 20 yrs old. Some were older and some younger than father. Dad went sucker fishing with grandpa when he was about 12 yrs old & Sanford was not there then. His boys Angus & Amos went along to Conways Creek to fish. Al. Perc's father & mother had just been married & were living in the house with the Burleys. They went to Conways Creek on horseback.
